History

The Bombay cat was developed by Nikki Horner, a breeder from Louisville, Kentucky. Horner wanted to create a cat that resembled a miniature black panther. She crossed a black American Shorthair with a Burmese and then backcrossed the resulting kittens to the American Shorthair. The first Bombay cats were born in 1958.

Appearance

The Bombay cat is a medium-sized cat with a short, glossy black coat. The coat is close-lying and has a satiny sheen. The Bombay's eyes are large and copper-colored. The nose and paw pads are black.

Personality

The Bombay cat is a friendly and affectionate cat that makes a great companion for families with children and other pets. The Bombay is a playful and curious cat that loves to explore and play. They are also very loyal and devoted to their families.

Care

The Bombay cat is a low-maintenance cat that is easy to care for. The coat should be brushed weekly to remove dead hair and keep it looking its best. The Bombay should also be bathed every 2-3 months.

The Bombay cat is a healthy breed with a life expectancy of 12-15 years. However, there are some health conditions that the Bombay may be prone to, such as hypertrophic cardiomyopathy (HCM) and polycystic kidney disease (PKD).

Feeding
