Faith in the Face of Crime: Capitol Unit is an inspiring story of redemption and hope. It is a must-read for anyone who has ever been touched by crime or violence.

The book tells the story of a group of inmates at the Capitol Unit, a maximum-security prison in Texas. These men have all committed serious crimes, but they are also trying to turn their lives around. With the help of a chaplain and a group of volunteers, they are learning to forgive themselves and others, and to find hope for the future.

The book is full of powerful stories of transformation. One inmate, named John, was sentenced to death for murder. But after years of reflection and counseling, he came to terms with his crime and found forgiveness. He is now a mentor to other inmates, helping them to find their own path to redemption.

Another inmate, named Mary, was sentenced to life in prison for drug trafficking. She was a single mother with two young children. But in prison, she found a new sense of purpose. She became a leader in the prison's substance abuse program, and she helped countless other women get their lives back on track.

The stories in Faith in the Face of Crime are a testament to the power of redemption. They show that even the most hardened criminals can change their ways and find hope for the future.

The book is also a call to action. It challenges us to rethink our attitudes towards crime and punishment. We need to find ways to break the cycle of violence and poverty that leads so many people to prison. We need to create more opportunities for redemption and rehabilitation.

Faith in the Face of Crime is a powerful and inspiring book. It is a must-read for anyone who cares about crime and punishment, and for anyone who believes in the power of redemption.
