**Q: What inspired you to write the Outlander series?

**A:** I was watching a documentary about the Battle of Culloden, and I was struck by the fact that the Highlanders were so different from the English soldiers. I wondered what it would have been like to be a woman who was caught in the middle of that conflict, and the Outlander series was born.

Q: Your books are known for their blend of historical fiction, romance, and adventure. How do you balance these different elements?

A: I think it's important to have a strong historical foundation for your story, because that gives it a sense of reality. But I also think it's important to have a strong romantic element, because that's what keeps readers engaged. And of course, you need some adventure to keep the story moving.

Q: The Outlander series has been adapted into a successful television series. What was it like to see your characters come to life on screen?

A: It was amazing! I was so excited to see the actors bring my characters to life, and I think they did a wonderful job. I'm also really happy with the way the show has stayed true to the books.

Q: What advice would you give to aspiring writers?

A: The most important thing is to just keep writing. Don't be afraid to make mistakes, and don't be afraid to share your work with others. The more you write, the better you will become.

Q: What are you working on now?

A: I'm currently working on the ninth book in the Outlander series. I'm also working on a new historical fiction series set in the American South during the Civil War.

Diana Gabaldon is a master storyteller who has captured the hearts of millions of readers around the world. Her Outlander series is a testament to her talent and her ability to create characters and stories that stay with readers long after they finish reading them.

If you're a fan of historical fiction, romance, or adventure, then I highly recommend checking out the Outlander series. You won't be disappointed.
