Through lyrical prose and evocative imagery, Petrova delves into the lives of ordinary people who are grappling with extraordinary challenges. In "The Red Dress," a young woman must confront the ghosts of her past when she returns to her childhood home. In "The Lost Boy," a father searches for his missing son, only to find that the truth is more elusive than he could have ever imagined. And in "The Last Wish," an elderly woman on her deathbed reflects on the choices she has made and the life she has lived.

Petrova's stories are both heartbreaking and hopeful. They remind us that the past is never truly behind us, but it can also be a source of strength and inspiration. With compassion and insight, she explores the complexities of human relationships and the resilience of the human spirit.

Past Imperfect is a stunning debut collection that will stay with you long after you finish reading it. These stories are a reminder that the past is always with us, but it is up to us to decide how we will let it shape our future.
