Jack Thayer, a first-class passenger, provides a chilling account of his encounter with the iceberg that tore through the ship's hull.

The Passengers:

- Margaret Brown, "The Unsinkable Molly": A wealthy socialite and philanthropist, Margaret Brown's quick thinking and unwavering spirit inspired countless passengers.
- Charles Joughin, the "Unsinkable Steward": A chef and baker by trade, Joughin spent hours tending to the survivors in the freezing waters.
- Isidor and Ida Straus: A devoted couple who refused to be separated, even as the ship sank.

The overcrowded lifeboats and the desperate struggle for survival are vividly captured in Ballard's account.

The Crew:

- Captain Edward Smith: The tragic figure at the helm, Smith's unwavering dedication to duty cost him his life.
- Thomas Andrews, the Ship's Designer: Haunting by his knowledge of the Titanic's flaws, Andrews remained on board until the very end.
- Herbert Pitman, the Lookout: The young sailor who spotted the iceberg but was unable to prevent disaster.

Captain Edward Smith's unwavering dedication to duty and his tragic fate are explored in the book.

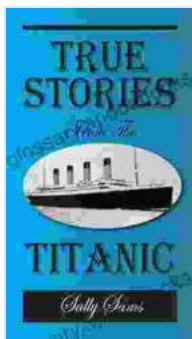

Beyond the harrowing moments of the sinking, Ballard delves into the aftermath, exploring the impact the tragedy had on survivors, their families, and history itself. He sheds light on the biases and prejudices that played a role in who was rescued and who was left behind.

Ballard's meticulous research unveils new insights into the Titanic's wreck and the painstaking efforts to uncover its secrets.

In "True Stories From The Titanic," Robert Ballard presents a captivating account of the world's most notorious sea disaster. Through the eyes of survivors and crew members, he brings the human toll of this tragedy to life, offering a poignant and unforgettable glimpse into a night that changed the course of history.
